Borrower's Acknowledgement of Obligation

The National Student Loan Data System has alerted our office that you have loan(s) that were discharged due to your total and permanent disability (TPD). Students who have loans discharged under TPD are not eligible to receive further federal student loans unless they can be certified by a Physician that they are able to engage in substantial gainful activity (paid employment). TPD discharged student loans do not impact your ability to receive Pell Grants.

- Pell Grant ONLY: If you do not want to use student loans, and ONLY want any Pell Grant funds you are eligible to receive, check box 1 below, sign, date and upload this form to your online Financial Aid Student portal at https://finaid.park.edu/NetPartnerStudent
• Loan Borrower Acknowledgement: If you would like to use federal student loans for the 2023-2024 Academic Year, you must check box 2 below to indicate your confirmation that you have the ability to engage in substantial gainful activity, and you acknowledge that the new federal student loan(s) or the TEACH grant service obligation cannot later be discharged for any present impairment unless it deteriorates so that you are once again totally and permanently disabled.

Borrower's Student Loan Acknowledgement must be completed for each academic year. You must also have the Physician's Certification completed and uploaded.

*If you qualified for TPD discharge through Social Security Administration (SSA) or Physician certification, you'll go through a 3-year monitoring period after your discharge. If you take out new loans during the monitoring period, you could lose your TPD discharge and have your loans/grant obligation reinstated. You are responsible for your monitoring period and any impact taking new loans may cause. https://studentaid.gov/manage-loans/forgiveness-cancellation/disability-discharge
